Dunbar Singing Band Feature Of Yesterday

The second day of the local Chautauqua found the full program in working order from the Children's hour and educational lecture at 10 o'clock in the morning until the Dunbar Singing Band had appeared on the platform. A good sized audience of children and women gathered at the big tent in the morning to hear Miss May Jones give her folk-lore stories in Japanese costume and at 11 o'clock the Boy Scouts met with Scout Master Hargrave for instruction

Yesterday afternoon following the musical prelude by the Dunbar Singing Band, Grosvenor Dawe, a forceful lecturer delivered his address. "A Man's Duty to His Community." Mr. Dawe, who is one of the organizers of the National Chamber of Commerce, impressed upon his hearers the necessity for community organization for protective purposes. In point of business from a sanitary viewpoint, for the betterment in every way of each region, he urged the consolidation of all interests for mutual benefit.

At the evening performance practically every seat was occupied when the Dunbar Singing Band appeared on the platform and they were forced to respond to numerous encores following each number of an interesting program. The nine men who compose this organization are musicians in every sense of the word and can produce as much harmony out of their instruments that is secured from many 30 piece bands. Their singing numbers gave the audience some unusual ensemble singing, splendid timbre, shading, studied tone, quality and real artistry and every solo number was greatly enjoyed. They injected enough real funny tactics into the program to liven it up and keep the audience in a mood that was bound to spell success when their final number was given. In a few words the Dunbar Singing Band lived up to their reputation of developing the highest possibilities in band music last night and should they ever appear here again they will find that they enjoy the friendship of a large number of lovers of good music.

This morning Miss Jones appeared in Russian costume during the usual Children's hour at 10 o'clock and at the same time Prof. Crook delivered his lecture "From Poverty to Prosperity." The attendance at these morning lectures is not what it should be and it is evident that the public does not realize what a good part of the weeks program they are missing. This afternoon Sutphen's Metropolitan Music Men will give the musical prelude and Professor Crook will appear for the first time at an afternoon program delivering his lecture on "Socialism."

Tonight the capicity of the big tent will be taxed with the appearance of Sutphen's Metropolitan Music Men and the Ben Greet Players who will present a Shakespearian drama "The Taming of the Shrew." The program will begin at 7:30 sharp.

The program for tomorrow is as follows:

Morning—Boy Scouts.
Children's Hour— German Folk-Lore stories (In Costume.)
Educational Lecture—"Child-Labor a Recognized Evil."
Afternoon—Musical Prelude
The Alfred Hiles Bergen Co.
Lecture—"International Peace"
Hon. Jas. G. Stutesman.
Evening—Grand Musical Entertainment, The Alfred Hiles Bergen Co.

Water Company Again

Monessen and Greensburg are not the only towns in this part of the state that are having their troubles with the water companies. Over in Connellsville sufficient evidence of lack of efficiency on the part of the Connellsville Water company has been collected to warrant the city going before the Public Service commission with a request to be permitted to construct a plant of its own. The matter was taken up at the last meeting of the Connellsville council following a refusal of the company to act on a suggestion made at a conference of the town authorities and the officials of the water company.

Candidates Preparing For Game

Candidates for the Sunnyside and Shadyside base ball teams who will meet at the Page grounds Friday afternoon are getting into condition and while a number confine themselves to long hikes over the country others have appeared on the diamond with bats, balls and gloves and are working out in real fashion.

A great rivalry has arisen between the two managers of the teams and both are confident that their team will be returned winners.The game will be called promptly at 4:30 by Umpire George Myford and the contest is scheduled for the full nine innings despite the objections of some of the older members of the teams, who fear they will be unable to go the entire distance. Ashcom will probably pitch for the Shadyside with Carnes on the mound for the Sunnyside.

The tickets were placed on sale today and Miss Watson will make a canvas of the town asking the public to cooperate in securing additional funds for the milk and ice fund for the babies. It is a worthy cause and those who purchase tickets are sure to get their money's worth in amusement at the game.

Repairing Star

—Workmen are busily engaged on the interior of the Star theatre getting this popular playhouse ready for the opening which will occur some time next month. The painters and decorators are getting their final touches on and a new machine and curtain will be installed. The front will be given several coats of paint and will be greatly improved. Manager McShaffery has a great surprise in store for the lovers of good pictures when the theatre opens and will present to the public the famous set pictures, something entirely new in this section of the country.

Commisioner Muse Here

—William G. Muse, candidate for the office of County Commissioner on the Republican ticket was in town today meeting the voters. He is making an active campaign and is meeting with encouragement all over the county.

—Mrs Katherine Roth of Alequippa avenue is visiting relatives in McKeesport. she will probably remain several days.

Friendship Broken Following Argument

Mat Hallaran of Homestead and Thomas Oakley, of Belle Vernon, struck up an acquaintance yesterday that ripened into true friendship as the day passed and by night fall they were traveling the streets arm in arm with several pints of good whiskey in their hip pockets. Mat was evidently the moneyed guy and he treated Oakley like a brother at the bars and in the eating houses. The days program was to be completed by a visit to a picture show and Mat extended an invitation, which like all others was readily accepted by Oakley. When they had purchased the tickets Matt decided that pictures were too tame for him and he did not want to go in, Oakley persisted that they visit the show, however, and during the argument they came to blows.

An officer happened along and placed both men under arrest. At the hearing this morning Burgess Dunlap fail to see why Oakley did not appreciate the generous hospitality of his friend and fined him $2.00 and costs. He was unable to pay and will work on the streets. Hallaran was warned to steer clear of the city sharks and allowed his freedom.

Signs Printed

Large signs are being printed today and will be posted about town at once warning the public of the dangers that lurk in both the city and well water about town and notifying them to boil all water before using. A number of the wells will be closed temporarily while others will be filled up and not be allowed to be put in use again. Every precaution is being taken by the Board of Health to ward off a fever epidemic and the public is asked to cooperate by heeding the warnings of the organization.

New Records

Manager Thomas Laforte of the American Talking Machine company, announces two new double disc records that will meet with the approval of the local public. One is No. 1780 with "Those Charley Chaplin Feet" and "If You Can't Get a Girl in the Summer Time." The other is No. 1783 with "Are You the O'Reilly" and "Norway." Both of these records sell for 65c. You are invited to hear them at the American Talking Machine Parlor at 249 Schoonmaker avenue. 38

—Elgie Tobin of Roscoe, captain of the State foot ball team of last season is a visitor in town today.

Young Lads Are Found At Coal Bluff

John Kuvinski, age 10 years and Mike Kuvinski, age 5 years, sons of Mr. and Mrs. John Kuvinski of 501 Tenth street left home yesterday morning presumably on their way to school but when they did not return for lunch or at night the parents became worried and began a search over the country but with out result.

This morning the mother of the boys appeared at the police station to report the disappearance of her sons and was notified that they were being held in the lockup at Coal Bluff. It is not known how the boys traveled to that town but were evidently roaming about the town when picked up by the police who in turn telephoned the local authorities. The mother left this morning for Coal bluff to bring the boys back home.

Held For Court

John Yectan, charged with tying Katherine Atcheson, an 11 year old girl to a bed post with chains and ropes and also beating her with a strap on numerous occasions was given a hearing yesterday afternoon before Justice of the Peace Watkins and held for court under $200 bail on a charge of assault and battery. He denied most of the charges that were brought against him and stated that the girl was incorrigible and he was unable to keep her off the streets. The Justice, however, thought there was enough truth in the story related by the girl of her mistreatment to hold the man for the August term of court. He furnished the required amount of bail and was allowed his freedom.

More Evidence Secured Against Negro Suspect

Sergeant T. J. McLaughlin was in town yesterday and secured further evidence against the negro, John Douglas, suspected of the murder of Joseph Smith at his home along the Webster-Monessen road the night of June 20. The web is being tightly drawn about the suspected man and the officials are now certain that he will be found guilty of murder at the coming term of court in August.

Douglas was arrested in Fairmont by a detail of the state police last week under Sergeant McLaughlin. He was under suspicion since the night of the crime and following the discovery of a cut on his shoulder he was placed under arrest and Mrs. Smith, the wife of the murdered man taken to West Virginia to identify him. When she arrived at Fairmont she heard the negro's voice in another room and declared before she had seen him that he was the man.

Following the crime in which the aged man was shot through the neck and his wife brutally beaten during her struggle with the assailant whom she cut on the shoulder with an ax it is alleged that he left for his shanty at Donora and changing coats made his way to West Virginia. Sergeant McLaughlin yesterday found the bloody coat with the cut on the shoulder in the shanty and has also a picture of Douglas taken before the crime was committed with the coat on. He took the coat and also the ax, which Mrs. Smith used, to Greensburg to be used as evidence when the trial is called.

Mrs. Smith was in Greensburg Monday and attracted attention by appearing on the streets in a long black rain coat and a man's hat. Her dress was ragged and brown with age and she had the appearance of a typical backwoods resident with her dark complexion and gray hair.

Maccabees Picnic

The thirty-secod anniversary of the Knights of the Maccabees of Western Pennsylvania was celebrated yesterday at Kenneywood park. It is estimated that nearly 7,500 persons attended, among them quite a number from this city. The athletic field was the center of interest for most of the local picnickers and as usual they were found among the winners of several events. Harry Malone of this city won the quarter mile run, John Meyers took second honors in the 70 yard dash for boys, and Frank Malone took second place in the 100 yard dash open.

WANT CONCLAVE HELD IN EAST

Quaker City Makes Bid For G. O. P. Convention.

CIVIC ORGANIZATIONS ACTIVE

Eastern Republicans Argue That Next Meeting For Nomination of President Should Be Held In a Rock-Ribbed Republican City — Middle West Cities Are After the Honor, and Now Greatly Fear Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, July 27.—Many prominent Republicans and civic organizations in and about Philadelphia are endeavoring to influence the Republican national committee to select this city as the place for holding the national convention. Foremost in the movement is United States Senator Boies Penrose, who recently conferred with Republican National Chairman Charles D. Hilles on the subject.

Though a convention city will not be chosen before the meeting of the committee in December, it is felt by Philadelphians that it will require at least five months' wire-pulling to land the much-coveted honor. Chicago, St. Paul, St. Louis and other aspirants evidently are of the same opinion and quite a fight is being waged.

The Pennsylvania city is handicapped somewhat by geographical location. Chicago, St. Paul and St. Louis claim that it should not be held in any eastern city, and until recently they believed that Philadelphia was not to be feared as a contender. But now the middle west cities have awakened to the fact that some strong arguments are being presented for the chief city of Pennsylvania, and that there is no positive assurance that Philadelphia is out of the running.

"Pennsylvania had the honor of being the convention city in 1900, when President McKinley was renominated," said Senator Penrose recently "and that gathering was a notable one. If next year's convention is held here I am sure that we will be able to duplicate that success."

State Chairman William E. Crow also visited National Chairman Hilles on behalf of the movement to hold the convention here. He states that Chairman Hilles personally is quite impressed with the argument that it would be good politics to hold the convention in a rock-ribbed Republican city such as Philadelphia.

III.

Peter West lay dying And the secret that was dying with him grew heavy on his conscience. At the very time that Edgar Clay and his partner were seeking to pierce the black pall of ruin that was slowly pressing down on them, he was seeking to penetrate the still blacker curtain of the future—seeking to know his fate.

"I didn't do it; I didn't have anything to do with it. God knows I'm innocent," he mumbled over and over to himself

The nurse leaned over him

"Did you call?" she asked.

"It was nothing," he feebly answered "I was talking to myself

"I didn't do it, God knows it's nothing on my soul—I'm innocent—innocent—innocent"

But the still small voice could not be silenced And so Peter West hesitated at the door of eternity. His laden soul refused to cross the border with its weight of guilty knowledge

Again the nurse leaned over him

"Send for Edgar Clay," he whispered.

Doctor Dessing came hurriedly to the bedside He made another examination of the sinking man and his face was very grave

'Tell me the truth, doctor" West demanded 'Am I really dying'

The doctor nodded.

'Dying' I must see Edgar Clay Phone him"

And thus it was that Russell Irwin and Edgar Clay were interrupted in their conference the second time

'It's a call from a dying man I don't know him but perhaps I'd better go, announced Clay, turning from the phone

"Yes, go," said Irwin, "we can do no good here!"

And while Clay was on his way to the humble cottage of the stricken man, Doctor Dessing had sent yet an other phone message. This time it was to Horace Stone

"I thought I'd tell you, Horace, that your old clerk is dying. His end is very near It is only a question of minutes"

'Too bad, too bad," answered Stone in a voice that seemed to have something of relief in it Too bad Poor fellow. Keep on doing everything you can for him, doctor, and send me the bills as you have been doing."

"All right," answered the doctor, and then as an afterthought he added, "and, by the way, West begged me to send for Edgar Clay He said he had to see him before he died"

"Some foolish fancy, no doubt," quickly interrupted Stone "He'll have forgotten it by now Pay no attention to it. Never mind sending for Clay."

"But I already have," answered the doctor, and he was surprised at the suddenness with which the conversation terminated. Stone had hung up on him.

Clay and death made a merry race of it for the bedside of Stone's old clerk. And Clay won.

Feebly raising one trembling hand, West haltingly grasped Clay's extended palm and indicated to the doctor and nurse that he wished to be alone with his guest.

"Take that pad and pen from off the table and write as I dictate" the dying man commanded And this is the statement he made with the last ounce of breath in his emaciated body:

"I relieve my soul of the confession that my employer, Horace Stone, stole $100,000 in securities from Edgar Clay, Sr., to whose son I am now dictating this confession. Stone obtained the signature of transfer while Clay was intoxicated, one hour before said Clay was killed by train I have been bribed by Stone to keep this quiet"

Summoning all of his waning strength West took the pen from the young man's hand, and with a firmness that was remarkable in one so near death, penned his name, in a good, clear signature at the bottom of the confession

And then as if his wearied spirit had been released by the lifting of a great burden, Peter West, smilingly lay back and peacefully passed away

Slowly, with that awe all feel in the presence of the great leveler of human rank, Clay, the precious confession safely stowed away in his inside coat pocket, tiptoed from the room, and pausing only long enough to see the last few immediate attentions rendered by the nurse, left the saddened cottage and hurried away to find his partner.

He did not know that Stone, peering from the shadow of a neighboring building, had seen his departure, and had gazed long and earnestly after him as he strode away Anxiety and hate were depicted on the attorney's face as he shrugged his shoulders in impotent rage and muttered to himself:

"I must find out what he knows."

IV.

And now, impelled by the swift and inexorable fate that had been released by Folly's hand, events were moving swift and fast to a certain crisis Slowly the pattern in the woof of these people's lives was being completed Poor fools all, they had done homage at Folly's court and were about to pay the price

Mrs Clay was back at Cora Blake's, playing heavily as was her wont, and losing steadily Clay was back at his partner's office showing him West's confession, and laying plans to benefit by the knowledge that had so strangely come to him Stone was back at his desk, busily scheming to find a way to learn what Clay had found out

Just at the time that Irwin and Clay had decided that this confession of West's would probably prove their financial salvation Stone had remembered, almost as an inspiration, that this was the night of the Van Linds' ball, and that Clay would surely be there Just as the time that Irwin and Clay determined that they would have to be pleasant to Stone until Monday morning and not let him suspect their knowledge, lest he skip town Stone had decided that Mrs Blake would have to get him an invitation to the ball, so that he could attend and pump Clay

And thus it was that they met in surroundings so foreign to business and intrigue and crime—thus it was that they met beneath the entwined flags of many nations, and mumbled commonplaces to the tune of modern dance music

A partner claimed Irwin and laughingly carried him off Clay, true to his arrangement with his senior partner, was more than usually cordial to Stone was in fact almost feverishly eloquent in his anxiety to make a good impression

"Let's see if we can find a drink," he ventured more from force of habit than because he cared to join the oily attorney in the cup that cheers

A momentary gleam of satisfaction showed in Stone's eyes as he laughingly assented They found a den and sent a servant for wine

And now perhaps it would be best to draw the curtain over the scene that followed, would be best if it were possible to hide from the reader the undoing of young Clay—spendthrift, bankrupt and disciple of folly. Wine was to his inherited weakness much as blood to the nostrils of the hungry tiger And in Stone he had a companion who played upon that weakness

"Too bad about old West," ventured Stone

"Yesh, he sh dead, poor fellow," hiccoughed Clay

"Had some peculiar notions," continued Stone "He always thought I was robbing someone"

"Well and weren't you?" Clay returned with all the solemn gravity of a man well in his cups.

"I never robbed a man in my life" This latter from Stone, quick and sharp, like the crack of a whip

"Shorry old man, shorry to doubt what you shay, but we got you—we got you right—confession you know"

Stone started as if struck. And as he gazed at the swaying, pitiful figure before him, he realized that his worst fears had been well founded

He made another effort to question the drunken man but was only answered by a foolish laugh. He had done his work too well. In an effort to loosen Clay's tongue he had urged too much wine upon him and the effect was as unsatisfactory as if he had not had enough Unable to get anything further from him he searched his pockets thinking he might find the confession

"April fool 'Fession's home I hid it in little wife's jewel safe Clay's no fool—Clay's no fo-o" The sentence died away into a deep long snore. Clay was asleep, standing up.

Stone stared searchingly at the vacant features of the man before him for a moment and then started to replace the papers in his pocket

'You thief"

He heard the words and felt the firm grip on his collar before he realized that Irwin, anxious about his partner and searching for him, had come upon them in the lonely den

"You thief," Irwin repeated 'First you fill a man with drink and then you rob him'

"You know better than anybody that Clay requires no help when it comes to drinking," sneered the attorney.

Irwin answered with an oath and there was a struggle as the younger man broke away from him. Leaping back with an agility remarkable in a man who had so little outdoor training, Stone seized one of the empty bottles and raising it, rushed at Irwin as if to brain him Quick as his opponent had been, Irwin was quicker and his silver-plated revolver spoke before Stone had covered half the distance between them. With a crash the upraised bottle thundered to the floor and Stone, smothering an oath, grasped his wounded right hand with his left Clay slowly sank an inert mass across the table And then it was that the curtain was violently pulled aside, and then it was that the horrified and startled dancers at Mrs Van Lind's ball gazed in spellbound wonder at the unfinished tragedy that was to mean ruin to so many lives. It was the beginning of the end.

V.

'Twas the day after the Van Linds' ball

Stone had left this dance immediately after the startling scene in the den, and had spent the time until daylight with a party of his gay companions And now, looking fit and debonnaire, despite his revels of the night before, he was calling on Mrs Blake

She could not hide the infatuation she felt for him, and solicitously she examined his bandaged hand

"It's a mere scratch," he lightly assured her, and adroitly he turned the conversation to Mrs Clay and her losses

"You still have the I. O U. she gave you?" he asked

She showed it to him

"You must go to her," he said, "and demand payment"

"But this is Sunday, Horace And, besides, she has no money"

Solicitously he leaned towards her. Loverlike his arms stole about her as he moved closer to her on the garden bench

"But this is important dear" (His voice was soft and caressing) "In her jewel safe she has a paper—a confession—that I must have Go to her today—now—demand your money. And when she refuses, ask for a jewel as security. Get her to show you her jewel case. Make her open the safe on some pretext Get that paper—get it for me—and we will go away together Remember, we are to be married'

To know how well his plan succeeded, we have only to turn, one hour later, to Isabelle's pretty boudoir Clay was there And Irwin And the chief of police They had asked him to come that he might see the confession, and act quickly without waiting for the court's action on Monday They feared that Stone would leave town Time was precious

The door of the secret safe in the wall was wide open The cover of the jewel case was up The paper was gone.

"More of your drunken folly," Irwin shouted 'I suppose you told Stone last night, when he pumped you in the den"

"Stone got nothing from me," Clay doggedly replied. "I never talk when I am drunk"

And only Isabelle, shrinking in the big chair before the fireplace, knew Only she could have told where the paper went. Only she could have told—and she remembered it all so distinctly now—how Mrs Blake had moved suddenly toward the safe, as she had carried the jewel case to the table by the window Only she could have told of that faint momentary rustle of paper she had heard in the brief instant that her back was turned.

"A paper gone,' she muttered to herself in anguish "Then Mrs Blake is the thief, and if I tell, she'll expose me"

Though Isabelle well knew that for her to hold her tongue meant poverty and hardship all her life, though she knew that it meant the entire loss of happiness for herself and her husband, who could not exist without the luxury to which they had been accustomed, though she knew that her action was dragging down her father into poverty and business failure with her husband, she could not drive her errant tongue to speak the few simple words that would have cleared all

Insistently, persistently, she maintained that she did not know where the paper had gone; that she had never seen it, that nobody had been in the room with her

And so the craven fear that held her tongue made silence her latest and greatest folly, while ruin, gaunt and horrible, stalked through all their lives. All were paying a horrible price for her folly and more so

* * * * * * *

And Mrs. Blake! What of her? Mission accomplished and paper safely in her possession, she became suddenly possessed of a desire to tell Stone of her success Hers had been the dangerous work Hers was to be the reward She would claim it now

Almost girlish were her actions as she tiptoed up to the door of Stone's flat, and finding it ajar, softly entered

"You'll Not Do Away; You'll Stay and Pay—Pay for Your Folly."

Guided by voices that came from the library she made her way into the house. Womanlike she paused to listen

"And tomorrow you and I will go away together"

The voice was Stone's There was no mistaking it Something seemed to go dead within her. Craftily she peered around the edge of the portiere, and weak, stunned, angry, she staggered back. Her bubble had burst. Stone was planning to go away with one of his chorus friends She had been the cat's paw—the dupe.

Quickly she left, as quietly as she had come, and going to her own apartment she telephoned Stone to come to her, and handing him an envelope filled with black paper, she said, "Here is the confession"

With catlike cunning she watched his eagerness as he seized the envelope, watched the sudden wonder on his face that turned to anger as he found that he had been duped

"What does this mean?" he demanded hotly.

"Listen and you shall hear,' she replied calmly and told him all that she had seen and heard in his rooms "As for the confession, I secured it and shall keep it," she concluded.

He sprang at her, his fingers extended as if to throttle her, only to start back from the gleaming silver revolver that she pointed at him

'No, I'll not give you the confession," she sighed, wavering for an instant, "you'll not take it from me either And you'll not go away with your chorus girl friend No Horace Stone, you'll not go away," she shouted in angry passion the very violence of her emotions bringing back her strength, 'you'll stay, and I will hold this confession over your head to brand you as a thief whenever I see fit You'll not go away, I say You'll stay Yes, and you'll pay—pay dearly for your folly."

"WHO PAYS?"

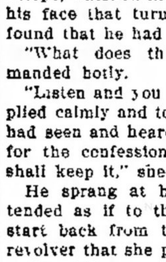
MRS. THOMSON TELLS WOMEN

How She Was Helped During Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I am just 52 years of age and during Change of Life I suffered for six years terribly I tried several doctors but none seemed to give me any relief. Every month the pains were intense in both sides, and made me so weak that I had to go to bed. At last a friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I tried it at once and found much relief. After that I had no pains at all and could do my housework and shopping the same as always. For years I have praised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me, and shall always recommend it as a woman's friend. You are at liberty to use my letter in any way"—Mrs THOMSON, 548 W. Russell St., Philadelphia, Pa.



Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

If the reader has a "bad back" or any kidney ills and is looking for an effective kidney medicine, better depend on the remedy endorsed by people you know. Doan's Kidney Pills have given great satisfaction in such cases. Monessen citizens testify to this. Here is a case of it:

H. R. Wilbur, 131 McKee avenue, Monessen, says: "I contracted a heavy cold which affected my kidneys. My back was sore and lame all the time and I had to have help to turn in bed. My whole body was like a board I often had to have somebody dress me. Shooting pains darted through my body and I could not do my work. My body became bloated. The secretions were profuse in passage and contained sediment. I had dizzy spells and hot flashes, and I was miserable in every way. I doctored for years but didn't improve. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me and two boxes practically cured me Now and then I take Doan's Kidney Pills as a tonic, and give them credit for keeping me well."

TODAY and every day this week is a banner day. The Exploits of Elaine in two reels. "The Prize Story" in 3 reels, featuring H. Myers and R. Theby, and one of the famous L-Ko comedies "The Child Needed a Mother."

THURSDAY of course the 11th chapter of "Who Pays" which picture is followed not only by the Monessen people, but by the best people of the entire valley, and 4 other Universal fine pictures.

FRIDAY we have pictures of the strongest and best companies of America, Imp's 2 reels, Victor's 1 reel, Nestor's 1 reel, comedy all under Universal company and Balboas great productions.

SATURDAY—Wonderful day. 1st. Bison's 2 reels, "The Toll of Sea Diving." 2nd. Powers, "The Stranger," 1 reel drama. 3rd. Joker, "Freaks" with Max Ashe and Gale Henry, every one knows what these two star comedians means, smashing the records everywhere. 4th. Animated Weekly with its daily and weekly news and the world's famous cartoonist Meyers, and one of Pathes great cartoon comedy. I, the manager of this theatre am wondering how this is possible, how can we handle such famous stars daily in Monessen, while in the large cities such as Pittsburg, Philadelphia, etc., only are handling either 4 reels daily or one subject of 5, 6, or 7 reels, then they are charging 15, 25 and 50 cents admission, with no better accommodations, than the small Monessen has.

But we must admit that partly we owe it to our good patrons when they become almost professors in the moving picture line and they know how to appreciate a good thing when they see it. I was astonished today, talking to our ticket seller with her fine ideals in every line, and upon my question, where did she get these ideas, the answer was, by attending the pictures daily. The people yet do not know what they are missing by not following closer the moving pictures, the Universal school in every line. Let us hope that you will do so in the future for a mutual benefit.

Where Life Is Cheap.

There are 100,000,000 children in China under ten years of age. One wonders how there are so many remaining for multitudes of children die off through exposure, ill care, starvation and disease. Hundreds of thousands of these children live in the Chinese sampans, which ply the rivers and throng the water fronts of the great cities. For generations these boatmen knew no other home than these boats. In case of babies a rope is attached under their arms and if they slip over the side of the sampan into the water they are fished out the best way possible. But life is plenty and cheap in China. "How much, then, is a man better than a sheep?" Not much better in China. A friend of mine, a Brooklyn judge, who arrived late at the daily public execution in Canton and who could only stay for the day, was told that for $10 they would secure a special victim to satisfy the American's curiosity. And they proceeded to find a man who for the sake of his family was willing to barter his life for $20. Of course he got the $10—and his life.—Christian Herald.

Ancient Halberds.

Halberd is the arms carry'd by the serjeants of foot and dragoons, the head of the halberd ought to be a foot or fifteen inches long, one end ought to be hollow to receive the staff, but the other broad, rubb'd in the middle, edg'd on both sides and drawing to a point, like the point of a two edged sword. On one side of the head is likewise fixed a piece in form of a half moon or star, and on the other a broad point of four inches long, crooked a little, which is very commodious for drawing fascines, gabions or whatever obstacle happen in the way. The staff of the halberd is about five feet long and an inch and half in diameter, made of ash or other hard wood. Halbards are very useful in determining the ground betwixt the ranks, and for dressing the ranks and files of a battalion, and likewise for chastising the soldiers.—Gentleman's Directory, 1705.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
